Weaving the Archetypes to Nourish Your Soul Song

What begins to stir in your body and being at the sound of the phrase “soul song”?

Maybe there is a part that pokes a toe out of the shadows holding hope and possibility that there could be space for them to come out into the light. Maybe there is a sense of joy, longing, remembrance, grief, hopelessness or even feeling lost.

Whatever the feelings and sensations, all of it is welcome and encouraged to be present in this deep dive into the world of archetypes with a focus on bringing more of them into conscious awareness in service to the wonder of YOU. With a nod to the works of Carl Jung and Caroline Myss, this weekend exploration will focus around discovering a deeper connection to your “soul song” - that unique transcendent weaving of the medicine of current life, ancestral and past-life threads into a vibration, a resonance, a song that you and only you can truly sing and live. So bring your playfulness, curiosity, yearnings, grief, bewilderment and hope as we weave this exploration of heart, mind and body in service to deeper nourishment and connection to the sacred that is alive within you in every moment.

Eamon Willow Davies, MSSW, (they/them, she/her) has been working with individuals and groups in the service of mind-body-soul integration for the past 20 years.

A practitioner deeply rooted in the archetype of the Weaver, Eamon Willow weaves the threads of their past training and history as a former Licensed Clinical Social Worker, Dance/Movement Therapy Alternate Route student, trained HealthRHYTHMS Facilitator, and Shamanic Practitioner into the integrative soul work they now offer from a shamanic perspective. They are passionate about co-creating spaces in which story, movement, rhythm, creative expression, the wisdom of the body and a connection to the ancestors are all welcome and encouraged towards healing and the cultivation of greater resiliency and sustainability for the individuals, groups and communities with whom they are privileged to work and play.
